
Leading in a Disruptive World 2.0

Whether it's a pandemic, staffing shortages, family and childcare challenges, supply chain issues, inflation, social justice, climate change, social media, emails, phone calls, and politics..., we live in a disruptive world. Leaders more than ever need to quickly adapt, communicate, make thoughtful decisions, and STILL remain mentally and physically healthy.

Learning Outcomes:

- Identify and understand the impacts of today's disruptive world on employees, organizations, and communities, and why they may be different than prior to the pandemic.
- Identify solutions to challenges, and opportunities caused by ongoing disruptions.
- Understand the skill sets needed to successfully guide organizations.

LEADHERSHIP

Lessons of a Reluctant Leader

Disinclined to accept—that is exactly how I felt about a leadership opportunity presented to me. Not everyone who leads wants to do so; some leaders are born out of necessity.

Can you fully embrace your role when you were reluctant to accept it in the first place? How?

Learning Outcomes:

- Discuss why leaders do not fully accept their roles.
- Identify ways to embrace the entirety of your leadership role.
